Elks sponsor students attending conference

The Middletown Elks Lodge No. 2179 Drug and Alcohol Awareness Committee has received 21 applications for the 10th annual New Jersey State Elks Peer Leadership Conference.

The committee will fund costs associated with sending students and advisers to a program sponsored by the New Jersey State Elks Association, and coordinated by the New Jersey Prevention Network, Feb. 6-8.

Participants will attend various workshops, with the intent to bring the information back to schools and the participant's community. Local students taking part are Nicole Gibney and James Shannon, from Mater Dei High School, New Monmouth section of Middletown; and Lizzette Darouichi, Samantha Dickie, Erin Mackin, Kathryn Mazur, Meghan McGowan, Kerriann Morgan, Ashley Morin, Maura McKenichie, Allison Schwartz and Alaina Varvaloucas, from Middletown High Schools North and South.

'Tundra Swans and Cranberry Bogs' Feb. 7

The American Littoral Society, Sandy Hook, will present "Tundra Swans and Cranberry Bogs" Feb. 7 at 11 a.m. The two-hour hike will be along the cranberry dikes of the Pine Barrens where attendees will search for tundra swans and other wildlife. The hike is open to the public, and cost is $6 per person or $10 per couple. Registration is required. To register, call the Littoral Society at (732) 291-0055.

Red Day for Women. The AHA is encouraging women to wear something red such as a dress, scarf or shirt, to raise awareness and support all women who have been affected by cardiovascular disease. More than 500,000 women die annually from cardiovascular diseases, and close to 15,500 New Jersey females die each year from heart disease and stroke. For more information, call the AHA at 1-888-694-3278.

'Living Soil' educational materials available

The Freehold Soil Conservation District is offering "The Living Soil" educational materials. The free materials are suitable for children in grades K-8 and are available to teachers, parents, and youth groups in Monmouth and Middlesex counties. Orders must be placed by Feb. 20.

Materials focus on the fact that healthy soils support healthy environments, which support healthy life. Included in the material are an "Educator's Overview Guide" full-color resource and activities guide, "It All Starts With Soil," "Wonders of Soil" and "The Soil Story" activity books, a "Living Soil" poster, and "Living Soil" bookmark.

To place an order or for more information, call the Freehold Soil Conservation District at (732) 446-2300, ext. 25, fax (732) 446-9140, or e-mail info@freeholdscd.org.
